Workshop: Writing for Publication - Structure, Story and Content

Adam Cheng, MD, Director, Research and Development, KidSIM Simulation Program, Alberta Children's Hospital, Department of Paediatrics, University of Calgary

Writing up a research project for the purposes of publication can be a daunting and challenging task. Manuscripts that are poorly written run the risk of being subject to lengthy reviews or rejection from multiple journals. This workshop offers practical strategies to overcome the hurdle of writing manuscripts for publication. In this workshop, participants will be presented with a simple and effective framework for writing simulation manuscripts - Structure, Story, and Content - and have opportunity to apply this framework to their own research projects. In small group breakout sessions, participants will receive feedback from INSPIRE facilitators, with the goal of ensuring progress is made with ongoing manuscripts. By the end of the workshop, participants will have a clear approach to writing each section of their manuscript with a greater chance of successful publication.

Registration required. Limited to the first 50 attendees
